I still believe that the method of dealing in the cotton market proposed by the company was practical, but I was cruelly deceived in the honesty and reliability of the company. It has not been shown that the company could not earn the dividends they paid, but that it failed because it did not follow the outlined plan or attempt to do so,"

Dr. Thompson denies that he got a cent for writing the booklet, but admits he received commissions on business he secured for the company. He said that he had truly stated his experience with the company in the booklet and that he had advised no one to invest with the company.

"General Tyner is dead, driven to his grave by an outrageous persecution, and on his death bed he faced his trial and was vindicated of all accusations brought against him. Storey & Co. advertised extensively in the press and were unmoiested for over four years. Over two years under the present administration of the Postoffice Department because the bubble burst, a fact that could not be foreseen, and every efficial wants to shift criticism. It is cought to blame General Tyner for failure to close up the concern when no evidence of fraud was ever reported to him. This is a monstrous outrage and it is sought to hold me culpable because I acted as counsel for the company, a fact I never concealed for the employment was a perfectly legitimate and honorable one. I knew nothing of any fraud carried on by the concern. I have met all the accusations brought against me and disproved them.

Russell B. Harrison Tried To Expose Storey Cotton

INDIANAPOLIS, April 4.-Relative to the implication of G. C. Holden, postof-fice inspector, with the defunct Storey Cotton Company, at Philadelphia, Col. Russell R. Harrison, son of the former President, sees the beginning of scandalous revelations, which he predicted would result from an investigation for which he appealed to President Roose velt some time ago. Said Colonel Harrison: "For the last six months I have been confident that the Storey Cotton Company swindle would develop a great scandal in the Postoffice Department and much corruption among its officials. It was so firmly intrenched in the department and had so much protection that our fight on it had no effect until that our fight on it had no effect until recently.

"The information of the charges and complaints were immediately conveyed to the swindlers, and as far as possible our efforts brought to naught. The investigation may reach as high officials as the Arnold swindle, when ex-Attorney General Tyner and his assistants were involved. Some high officials will be involved at least for neglect of duty.

"I am actively pushing the investi-"I am actively pushing the investi-gation, and sent a further telegram to the President last night. The Presi-dent replied to my first appeal, stating that he would ease a thorough investithat he would cause a thorough investi-gation to be made. It is unfortunate that the Postoffice Department should be so scandalously involved in another one of these get-rich-quick swindles, and I hope that as a result of the present exposure the President will get rid of all the corrupted officials and re-store the confidence of the public in the Postoffice Department.

WILL NOT OPEN CANAL UNTIL FIRST OF MAY

Traffic Not to Be Resumed This Year Until Comparatively Late Date.

It was officially announced this morning that the Chesapeake and Ohio canal would not be opened until May 1. Heretofore the waterway traffic has been re sumed as early as March 15, but for some unexplained reason the opening will be forty-five days later this season. Col. G. L. Nicolson, general manager, returned a few days ago from a trip of inspection along the upper levels, and reports everything to be in readiness as far as the condition of the canal bed is concerned.

The Canal Towage Company still controls the traffic over the canal, and has made every arrangement for the present season to be the busiest in the hisent season to be the busiest in the his-tory of the company. The company em-ploys 600 men, 400 horses and mules, and 150 boats, each boat having a crew of four men, two drivers, a captain, and steersman. Last season the company purchased about fifty of the finest Ken-tucky mules.

Last year over 300,000 tons of Cumberland coal was shipped to Georgetown and sent from Georgetown to New England ports, in the huge barges of the Consolidated Coal Company.

"The Baptist Ministers' Conference deplores the present agitation in reference to the introduction of religious instruction in our public schools as unnecessary, unwise, and impolitic.

"it is unnecessary because there is nothing in the present condition of our public schools in the District of Columbia to warrant it. It certainly cannot be said that any increase of crime at the National Capital has been due to the neglect or proper instruction in our schools.

"It is unwise because it produces friction among citizens, and between faiths, and crouses prejudices for which there appears no adequate justification.

"It is impolitic because, as it is largely a ministerial movement, the cry of clericalism is in the air and the charge is made, with some seeming reason, that the church is attempting to regulate educational matters.

"We are of the opinion that the rules adopted by the board of education and now in operation confer upon the teachers all that is required to enable them to impart proper moral instruction, and

That while we are in hearty sympathy with moral instruction in the public schools, we see no reason to recede from the position of our fathers or to depart from the traditions of our denominational history, and we therefore, as the representatives of more than $,000 white Baptists in the District of Columbia, place ourselves on record as opposed to any movement which even by implication favors religious instruction posed to any movement which even by implication favors religious instruction in our public schools. and unknown, slight and day, keep your heart in motior—zontrol the digestive apparatus—regulate your liver—operate your kidneys.

These are the nerves that worry wears out and work breaks down.

It does no good to reat the alling organ—the irregular heart—the disordered liver—the rebellious stomach—the deranged kidneys. They are not to blame. But go back to the nerves that control them. There you will find the seat of the trouble.

It does no good to take stimulants and narcotics, for theirs, at best, is but a temporary effect which merely postpones the final day of reckoning.

There is nothing new about this—nothing any physician would dispute. But it remained for Dr. Shoop to apply this knowledge—to put it to practical use. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the result of a quarter century of endeavor along this very line. It does not dose the organ to deaden the pain—but it does go at once to the nerve—the inside nerve—the power nerve—and builds it up, and strengthens it and makes it well. That is the end of all vital troubles. That is the end of my remedy, merely write and ask. I will send you an order on your druggist which he will accept as gladly as he would accept a dollar. He will hand you from his shelves a standard sized bottle of my prescription, and he will send the bill to my remedy. Those who have once used the Restorative do not need this evidence. There are no conditions—no requirements. It is open and frank and fair, it is the supreme test of my limitless belief. All that I ask you to do is to write—write today.

"Have you the Maltese Cross?"

"What's that," asked West, who was startled and wanted to be sure that ne had been asked the right question.

"I said," repeated the Lewsboy, "Yes, follow me," came the repiv.

The newsboy looked at him in amazement, and then deliberately turning, attributes his good fortune partly to luck walked away. He had not gone four steps before a young man, who had been standing on the opposite cuther came across the street on the run.

"Have you the Black Arrow?" he asked, before he had reached West by several feet. Then, realizing his mistake, he asked, "Have you the Maltese Cross?"

"No-I mean yes, follow me," was to me I gaing to do with the West's reply who was barged become.

"No-1 mean yes, foilow me," was West's reply, who was himself becoming badly rattled.

It was at this point that a quiet, well-dressed young man, who had been standing a few feet distant reading a Times, and evidently waiting for a car, looked up, at first puzzled, then with a look of comprehension, and started for West, He had been standing not more than ten feet distant, and slowly started to waik toward West.

The Lucky Question.

Before he had covered half the distance he stood an excellent chance of being beaten to the goal. People who, from the other side of the street, had heard the questions and answers, were coming at West on the dead run. Fisher quickened his pace, and reaching West just in time, whirled him around and coming at West on the dead run. Maltese Crosses hidden in the northwest and southwest sections of Washington, which lasted all yesterday and far into last night and this morning, no hunter has been sufficiently lucky or clever to land the long green. Judging from the number of persons who were out early this bright morning the failure to land the money at the start has not daunted the treasure-seekers.
On Seventh street, between E and I southwest, and on Seventh street, between Sheridan and Harvard streets northwest, a crowd has wandered all day long, eyes bent upon the ground.
Searchers who are on their second day's hunt are beginning to recognize each other. Occasionally they hail one another as they pass by, asking if anything has been seen of the coveted envelopes. Exchange of Banterage. "Who made the Maltese cross?" ask man dressed in gray clothes searching or Seventh street northwest. Some one kicked it in the ribs, guess," said a boy standing near. "! ain't stopped running yet." "Haven't seen it running this way, have you, son? If you do, stop and call me. I want to put a tag on it."

"Huh," said the boy, "I guess ye think you are funny, don't you?" As has been repeatedly published in The Times, the envelopes are hidden in places that are accessible to. They are not so high that the shortest cannot reach them without borrowing Langlet's flying machine nor so low that the tallest cannot stoop to pick them up.

Neither wings nor a spade are necessary to get them. Nor are they hidden so that it is necessary to injure property to find them. erty to find them.
